[Email sent to Michael Watkins 4/13/2024]

Dr. Watkins

I demand an explanation for why I was banned from the department. I believe this is false and in violation of my first amendment rights. If you are not able to provide an adequate reasoning, I will be making a legal case against the philosophy department and the University (and any individual who I find culpable for this absurd abuse of power).

You tell me this with the most immediacy possible

Tom,

You should know that Jennifer came on to me first (sexually). I was too confused and embarrassed to say so at the time. What she did was wrong. You can see it deep down.

Dr. Gorodeisky,

Why are you unable to give feedback. I am a professional philosopher aiming to publish my work on Kant, and possibly enter the North American Kant Society graduate student essay contest. Why will you not help me? If this is because of the situation with Jennifer, please search your heart. Please have a conversation with ME, I took three classes with you I never harassed anyone. I did nothing wrong, and it is wrong of you to ignore me.

Sincerely,

Matthew Correia

One of the only chill professors at Auburn looking back. Do everything you can to refute Jennifer's regressive and politically disastrous ethical theory.

I'm a professional philosopher now, I will refute all of your work and ruin your reputation to the highest extent possible for not giving me a letter of recommendation and for ignoring me unless you apologize immediately.

[Email sent to Kelvin King 4/13/2024]

Look here, you fat, motherfucking COP prick. If you continue to "leak" my private email exchanges with professors to my father, I will not hesitate to take any relevant legal actions against the University, the Philosophy Department, yourself, and any other relevant body both on the grounds of violation of constitutional privacy and free-speech rights.

Upon further legal review, I have learned that, in fact, my initial banning from the University was illegal based on first ammendment rights. As Auburn recieves public funding, the first ammendment applies on campus.

Please see the following articles on the legal language:

https://firstamendment.mtsu.edu/article/substantial-disruption-test/

https://firstamendment.mtsu.edu/article/rights-of-students/

This is America. I say what I want. Unless it, according to the Supreme court, can be shown to be (1) otherwise illegal as in the case of a threat or truly pervasively actionably violent (not mean or expressive or disagreeable) language—in the language of the Supreme Court on campuses, "Did the speech or expression of the student "materially and substantially interfere with the requirements of appropriate discipline in the operation of the school," or might it "reasonably have led school authorities to forecast substantial disruption of or material interference with school activities?" Based on cases where this test has been applied successfully by petitioner against universities, I am quite confident that I will win any legal case (which may apply as well to any individuals who actioned this obvious abuse of power). To avoid this, I would like to settle this amicably. I would require, at the very least, an unequivocal revocation of any campus ban and possibly some sort of restitution for the time I was falsely banned.

Sincerely,

Matthew Correia

[Emails sent to Auburn University Counsel: Jamie hammer, Maran White, Morgan Sport, J.D. Lux, and Cindy Walker]

I am emailing the counsel at Auburn University with one final attempt to amicably resolve an issue I have had with Campus Security and the Philosophy Department. If your legal counsel is not able to gudie us toward a resolution, then I will be filing a law-suit against the University, the Philosophy Department, and any relevant parties on, at least, grounds of violation of my (1) first amendment rights by a university receiving public funds and (2) defamation, and (3)

I was banned, in 2021 from the philosophy department and all related events under the threat of a campus-ban. I have not attended any events since, but have lived in fear and have been traumatized by the experience to a great extent. Therefore, I am seeking amelioration by having any ban against me formally and unequivocally listed; as well as some sort of monetary compensation to reflect my pain and suffering as well as lost opportunities. Please email me back with either a sound, reasonable legal case for why you believe that I am wrong, or with a settlement offer.

Details from email I sent Kelvin King: "Upon further legal review, I have learned that, in fact, my initial banning from the University was illegal based on first amendment rights. As Auburn receives public funding, the first amendment applies on campus—full stop.

Dear All,

Here is a draft of the complaint I will be submitting in court against the University, the philosophy department, and Jennifer Lockhart (I reserve the right to add more defendants to the case as I see fit).

I will expect a prompt answer (with a settlement offer) or this suit will be filed in Federal Court, and I will win.

Update:

Do the lack of correspondence in relation to this pressing manner, my lawyer, James Brown, and I have decided to put a 24-hour deadline on this demand letter. If we do not receive some level of correspondence, preferably a prompt settlement offer given the blatantly open and shut nature of this case, this case will be filed in the Federal Court Middle District of Alabama.

Dear Jennifer,

I am requesting some nude pictures or at least pictures of you in your underwear for a research project I am conducting into the carnal beauty of the female form. Please do this soon!

I will write the next great History of Philosophy and paint you all out to be regressive fascists (especially Michael Watkins, Karen (don't you try to sneak the e in there you are a capital K Karen) Gorodeisky, Jennifer Lockhart, Tom Lockhart, and Kelly Jolley. At least, I believe, Guy Rohrbaugh and Roderick long are somewhat better off on my account.

'Dear all,

You all i would like to invite you to Jennifer and I'd coming sexual consummation. It will be soon, and we should not make a private object of such a beautiful aesthetic experience. I am extending this invitation to all of you! Jennifer is so cute I wonder what kind of panties she wears? I wonder what her vagina smells like? Probably amazing ;)

Sincerely,

Matthew Correia

All of you fucking suck. Tell Jennifer to answer me immediately, and let me fuck her. This is bullshit. I love her and you people are cruel, unfeeling, pieces of human waste.

Please remove me from this list unless you answer me email you stupid little fag. I'm gonna sue you people

Jennifer

Tell me the truth of what is occurring and why you gas-lit me and reported me for harassment for proclaiming my love for you.

I am not a student, I am not affiliated with Auburn University in anyway. I am a United States Citizen, and I am legally within my rights to contact you.

So, you explain this to me immediately or I swear to god I will get the strongest vengeance possible over you.

By ignoring me you're flouting your moral obligations to me and rights of recognition. Thus sustaining a cruel moral injury. Why are you doing this and why is Jennifer?

Micah,

There appears to have been a misunderstanding, in sending you these emails, I am in no way intending to contact Jennifer Lockhart through you--I am only attempting to contact you for your thoughts on the situation.

[Email to Thomas Lockhart on 4/15/2024]

Once, when in Jennifer's office hours, she told me story of Agnes Callard and how she publicly justified having two husbands/lovers in the context of the Symposium. While doing this, she got up and set next to me, then she put her arm on my thigh (I was wearing shorts) and continued to move it closer to my private area until I moved her hand away--she laughed and winked at me!

This was an obvious come-on and I did not attempt to have office hours with Jennifer again until she contacted ME, and flirted with me again, in the Summer after I graduated. This should obviously impact your judgment of her.
